Holzkecht, Zoie E.; Gentry, Lauren; Rao, Rasika; Lin, Shu S.; Herbert, Martha R.;

induction of autism is invariably linked with either inflammation or oxidative stress. Acetaminophen exposure in babies and young children may be much more strongly associated with autism because of well-known deficiencies in the metabolic breakdown of pharmaceuticals. One hypothesis for the increased prevalence of autism is that increased exposure to acetaminophen, which is neurotoxic in babies and small children. This view mandates extreme urgency in reducing acetaminophen use in babies and the possibility that many cases of infantile autism may actually be induced at birth.

Abstract

It was a bright October morning in 2012, and Grant Pattison, CEO of Massmart Holdings, took time to look at the Sandton skyline out of his fifth floor office. It was almost two years, since US retail giant Walmart had given notice of its intent to buy a majority shareholding in Massmart. Pattison was amazed at how much had happened since then, and how much he had learnt through a merger process, which had become a protracted legal battle. The Competition Appeal Court had, however, just given its final ruling on the matter. Looking back, he wondered what he would have done differently, had he known that the approval process would not be plain sailing.

Stress concentration phenomenon before the 2011 M9.0 Tohoku-oki earthquake; its implication for earthquake prediction (in AGU 2014 fall meeting, Anonymous)

American Geophysical Union Fall Meeting (December 2014) 2014

Abstract

According to rock mechanics, there exists a stage of stress accumulation before final failure, this kind of stage also exists in the seismogenic process, but this kind of stage always hide behind the vast seismicity data. There are 5 large earthquakes ( $M > 7.0$ ), generalized foreshocks, occurred in the same area of M9.0 Tohoku-oki Earthquake from 2002 to 2011, and they formed a unique pattern both in space and time.

1st Shenyang International Colloquium on Microfluidics
2007 | PROCEEDINGS OF THE FIRST SHENYANG INTERNATIONAL COLLOQUIUM ON MICROFLUIDICS , pp.190-191
The spectral characteristics of a household tricolor fluorescent lamp were discussed. Stronger fluorescent images can be obtained by rhodamine Band fluorescent particles which are excited by the 550nm spectral band of tricolor fluorescent lamp and filtered by the home-made plastic filters. It can be employed in the fluorescence detection and microfluid tracer experiment.
